A 22-year-old woman is dead and two other people are in critical condition after a collision at the red light at State Road 80 and U.S. 98 on Thursday, Dec. 11, about 2:40 p.m. Reyna Munoz, a passenger in the car driven by Pedro Solorzano of Live Oak, died at the scene.

According to Palm Beach County Sheriff's Department

Investigator Todd Evans, Solorzano was eastbound on SR 80 when he ran the red light and plowed into Fernando Maldonado, 33, of Pahokee. Solorzano and another passenger, Jesus Perez, were airlifted to St. Mary's Hospital with critical injuries. Maldonado, who was driving a 1997 Ford truck suffered minor injuries.

Officer Evans said charges are still pending in the accident.

Santa flying in to see 500 children at New Hope Center

Santa Claus will arrive by helicopter for the fourth annual New Hope Family Center holiday party for more than 500 underprivileged children on Thursday, Dec. 18 at 3 p.m. The Belle Glade Fire Department, Miami Police and many community supporters collected toys to be given to the children.

THE WEATHER WAS GREAT at Friday's Tri-City League Barbecue at the Belle Glade Marina. Over 700 city officials from across South Florida enjoyed an afternoon of music, good food, fellowship and Glades grown produce. The annual event is sponsored by the cities of Belle Glade, Pahokee and South Bay.

Mayor Anthony elected first vice president of National League of Cities

South Bay Mayor Clarence Anthony was elected to the office of First Vice President of the National League of Cities (NLC), putting him in line to serve as president of the nation's oldest and largest organization representing municipal governments in 1999.

The leadership elections came at the conclusion of NLC's 74th annual conference, the 1997 Congress of Cities, which brought nearly 4,000 local government leaders to Philadelphia. Council member Brian O'Neill of Philadelphia was elected NLC president for 1998, and Mayor Robert Knight of Wichita, Kansas, was elected second vice president.

"Clarence Anthony exemplifies the dedication and leadership skills that make the work of local government so resourceful and creative," said O'Neill. "He has served his community with distinction, he has led the Florida League of Cities, and we are delighted to have his talent and energy as part of NLC's top leadership."

Our cities and our citizens will be well served by his talent, his accomplishments and his vision to help make our cities stronger and better prepared for the challenges of the 21st century."

Florida official to hold a NLC top leadership post and the first since Mayor Glenda Hood of Orlando served as NLC President in 1992. He has served on the League's board of directors and the NLC Election '96 Task Force, and also served as president of the Florida League of Cities in 1995. He has served as mayor of South Bay since 1984.

Nearly 4,000 municipal leaders attended the 1997 Congress of Cities. The four-day NLC conference included a keynote address by retired General Colin Powell, chairman of America's Promise, who spoke about the importance of local leadership to achieve the goals set at the Summit on America's Future - the national meeting on youth issues he led in Philadelphia earlier this year.

EDGE Center gets $60,000 grant from USDA Rural Dev.

By Brenda Bunting

It's tough starting a new business, especially if money is tight. Now, Glades entrepreneurs can get a helping hand through grant monies at the EDGE Center. EDGE stands for Enterprise Development for Glades Entrepreneurs, and the center just got a grant for $60,000 from the USDA Rural Development to help up to 17

Glades residents start up their own businesses.

Carl Seibert, EDGE Center executive director, said additional funding of $57,500 will be available from the Glades Community Development Corporation, Inc. and another $80,000 from the county.

Ronald Whitfield, acting state director for USDA Rural Development, presented the $60,000 check to the center on Tuesday, Dec. 16. He said, "This will allow new businesses to get started and provide jobs. It is a true partnership and Carl has done an excellent job of getting this started."

Mr. Whitfield said Rural Development also provides grant monies for the Belle Glade Housing Authority and last year alone gave $156 million in grants in the state of Florida.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Much misinformation and rhetoric has surrounded the notion of "restoring" the Everglades since it became an explicit goal of the state in 1983. In an effort to assist with the overall understanding of the complex issues surrounding Everglades restoration, a report titled "The Everglades: A Volatile Mix of Science and Politics" was prepared for elected officials and Everglades stakeholders prior to the first meeting of Florida's Joint Legislative Oversight Committee on the Everglades. Written by former South Florida Water Management District Public Affairs Director Cathleen C. Vogel, the report is designed to provide background information on Everglades issues and to assess the current status of Everglades programs. The Sun is reprinting the contents of the report in a series of articles over the next few weeks to help local residents understand the Everglades restoration project and how it affects the local economy.

SLE medical alert lifted for Palm Beach County

The Palm Beach County Health Department, after consulting with the Florida Department of Health (DOH), has lifted the medical alert status for St. Louis Encephalitis (SLE) effective immediately for all of Palm Beach County. The SLE medical alert has also been lifted statewide by the DOH for the covered 27 counties in Florida.

The alert has been canceled due to the continuing trend in the reduction of Culex nigripalpus mosquito counts, fewer chicken seroconversions and the continuing reduction of environmental conditions suitable for the amplification and transmission of SLE in Palm Beach County.

Residents and visitors (especially the elderly) should continue taking common-sense precautions to minimize mosquito bites. A single new presumptive positive sentinel chicken seroconversion (located in Canal Point) and four confirmed (repeated samples West Boca Raton and Belle Glade, two at each site) positive chicken seroconversions were reported last week in Palm Beach County. No new confirmed human cases of SLE disease have been reported in Palm Beach County. Sporadic sentinel chicken activity should be waning during the rest of December, according to Mike Lowdermilk with the health department.

Historically, SLE active years are followed by little or no activity in the following years. Little is known to fully explain this or why intense SLE activity appears to occur on seven to 13 year cycles.

The Palm Beach County Health Department Division of Environmental Health and Engineering will place new sentinel chicken flocks into the field in May of 1998 to resume regular early detection serological testing for both SLE and Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) arboviruses. The Palm Beach County Health Department has been doing the early detection program for 21 years.

Schools in the Glades are out of balance

"I see in the paper where they're talking about busing kids from Royal Palm to somewhere in West Palm.

Call the school board and ask them when they're going to try to do something with the schools out in the Glades which are about 95% out of balance. Just call them and ask them when they're going to try to do something with the schools out here.

And then they want to try to get a school tax passed by the voters on Sept. 1. I don't believe it will ever pass."

Letter to the editor

Congressman Foley writes to Vice President Gore about Talisman Property

Dear Mr. Vice President:

I would like to commend you for your continued commitment to the environmental restoration of the Florida Everglades. I especially applaud the recent announcement of the agreement, in concept, to acquire the more than 50,000 acres encompassing the Talisman Sugar Plantation in the Everglades Agricultural Area. Restoration of one of the largest functioning ecosystems in the world is a massive undertaking, and success will depend upon a united effort between the federal government, the State of Florida, and all local, regional, and tribal interests. This is important not only for the nation's second largest national park with its rare natural species and exotic plant life, but also for the entire population of South Florida that relies on the Everglades for drinking water.

During consideration of the Farm Bill in the 104th Congress, I authored an amendment to provide $200 million in environmental restoration funding for the Everglades, thus, providing for the largest federal commitment to the Everglades in history. This bipartisan plan is about environmental restoration that is wise and effective, and I am pleased that the President has seen fit to sign it into law.

In obtaining $200 million for Everglades restoration, it was my intent that federal purchasing agents give the absolute highest priority to those lands owned by willing sellers and that taxpayer dollars should not be wasted by paying more than fair market value for lands purchased with these funds. Consequently, while I welcome the news that the Talisman lands will be utilized in the environmental restoration of the Everglades ecosystem, I am concerned that taxpayers may be paying too high a price.

The Talisman lands were appraised at approximately $110 million in 1996. Why, therefore, would the federal government, the State of Florida, and the South Florida Water Management District pay a combined $133.5 million for the property?

Also, according to the terms of the agreement you announced, the Talisman Sugar Corporation will retain and keep its lands in production for four more years beginning October 1, 1998. I am concerned that this may not only further inflate the price of the Talisman property, but also set a precedent for inflating the price of future land acquisitions. How will federal payments for the Talisman property be structured? Given that Talisman will be allowed to continue production until the year 2003, will federal payments begin after production eases or will Talisman receive payment upon closing, six months from now?

Your involvement in the restoration of the Everglades ecosystem is commendable. However, I would appreciate learning more about how the purchase price for the Talisman property was determined. I am pleased that you have taken a personal interest in this issue, and I look forward to working with you in the future.

Sincerely,

Mark Foley
Member of Congress

Deck the halls with holly, not hazards

By Bill Nelson
State Fire Marshal
and Insurance Commissioner

While the holiday season is a festive time of year, it also is a time when fire and fire deaths increase. In fact, December is among the three leading months for home fires and home-fire deaths in the U.S. On average, our statistics show us more than one-third of the country's home-fire deaths occur in December, January and February.

Sadly, says the National Fire Protection Association, one of the main culprits is the Christmas tree. Christmas trees cause hundreds of fires every year, the NFPA says, partly because their stands tip over, or the trees catch fire from nearby candles and other heat sources; or they dry out from insufficient watering.

Floridians reported 28 Christmas tree fires to the State Fire Marshal's Office in 1996. Fortunately, no deaths occurred during these fires, but three people suffered injuries. From 1983-1996, such fires caused 28 injuries and 11 deaths among civilians, and eight injuries among fire service personnel.

Holiday season home fires are most commonly caused by inadequate chimney cleaning; placing things that can burn—such as the Christmas tree—too close to space and portable heaters; and, flaws in the design, use or installation of heating equipment.

The good news is that most of these fires are preventable. It's simply a matter of taking a few steps necessary to avoid them. Here is information on what to be aware of, along with some safety tips for a safe holiday season:

- Have your heating system inspected and cleaned, if necessary, by a trained professional before you start using it this season.
- Keep space and portable heaters at least three feet away from anything that can burn.
- Place your tree well away from candles, heat sources and exits. And if you're buying a tree, choose a fresh one, and remember to water it daily.

- Test your smoke detectors regularly and study the manufacturer's directions.
- Make sure you don't exceed the UL-approved voltage or wattage figure stamped on electrical equipment, for your indoor or outdoor holiday display.
- Check unplugged light strings for damaged bulbs or sockets. In particular, look for any cracks or breaks in the sockets, bulbs and filaments, and discard any broken items. Carefully inspect your light strings, while unplugged, for frayed wires. Discard any worn-out strings.
- Inspect chimneys regularly and make necessary repairs. Always keep the damper open when using your fireplace. Cover the entire opening of the fireplace with a screen. Dispose of ashes in a tightly sealed metal container. Make sure the fire is completely out before leaving the house or going to bed.
- Plan household escape routes, and practice with a fire drill.

Florida sexuality education programs are falling short

By Cathy Keen

University of Florida News

Sexuality education programs in Florida's public high schools fall short in teaching students what they need to know to stem the high rates of teenage pregnancy and disease, a new University of Florida study finds.

"The good news is that teachers surveyed like teaching sexuality education and are emphasizing abstinence," said Michele Johnson Moore, who did the research for her doctoral dissertation in health and human performance at UF. "The bad news is they don't spend much time on, or cover in much detail, some of the other methods of prevention, such as birth control and condoms, or have students practice skills necessary to make healthy, responsible decisions about their sexuality."

Using both the state's sexuality guidelines and those put forth by national sexuality professionals, Moore surveyed 261 teachers in 65 of Florida's 67 school districts in 1996 to determine the scope and nature of these programs in the public high schools. The state last required human sexuality education since 1990.

In general, the focus in the classroom is on the negative consequences of sexuality, not promoting a healthy perspective on human sexuality, Moore said. Studies show that teen-agers with negative feelings about their sexuality are less likely to protect themselves against pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases, she said.

Florida school programs also lack instruction in life skills, yet research shows that learning to negotiate, be assertive, make decisions and clarify values help students avoid unprotected and unwanted sexual activity, Moore said. School-based programs have been found to go beyond increasing knowledge to actually delaying intercourse, she said.

While nearly all teachers surveyed (94 percent) said they felt it was the appropriate role of the school to teach sexuality education, lack of time in the curriculum appeared to be a problem in adequately covering the subject, Moore said.

In addition, the average two hours of training per year teachers received probably is not enough to keep abreast of changing information, teaching techniques and skills-building activities, Moore said. There also seems to be a lack of sufficient materials, 80 more than half the teachers reported creating some or all of their materials for class, she said.

"This study is one of only a handful that investigate how sexuality education is really implemented," said Barbara Rienzo, a UF health education professor who supervised Moore's research. "Unfortunately, it shows that it is being carried out in less than an ideal manner. Many people, including our legislators, support sexuality education in our state, because they really want to do something to reduce teen pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases, but teachers lack sufficient time, resources and training to adequately address the problem."

The study found that slightly less than two-thirds of teachers (64 percent) included birth control in their curriculum, but some of the methods addressed were not necessarily the most appropriate.

Less than half of teachers described or showed proper use of a condom, for example, or addressed student concerns about condom use, possibly because of political reasons or personal discomfort with the topic.

On average, only about half the available birth control methods were reviewed, and some of the methods addressed were the least practical, Moore said.

"More teachers taught about the intrauterine device, which is not appropriate for adolescents, than the newer technologies of Norplant implants and Depo-Provera injections, which are more desirable for teens because of their high effectiveness rates," she said. "And only half discussed how to communicate with a partner about birth control, which is so important in avoiding sexually transmitted diseases, AIDS and unwanted pregnancies."

Research shows that more than half (53 percent) of all high school students have had sexual intercourse, with the average first time happening at just under age 15, Moore said. U.S. teen-agers have the highest rate of sexually transmitted disease among any age group and one of the highest pregnancy rates among Western industrialized countries, she said.

requiring all farms in the EAA to adopt Best Management Practices (BMPs) on their farms in order to achieve a 25% reduction in phosphorus.

Phosphorus concentration limits for the Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge and Everglades National Park.

The construction of 35,000 acres of Stormwater Treatment Areas (STAs) to remove phosphorus from EAA runoff.

While this settlement agreement provided a strong foundation for treating phosphorus in EAA stormwater, it did not address the hydropattern problems associated with the Everglades, nor did the settlement include any provisions for funding the construction of the STAs. By utilizing the SWIM process as the vehicle to implement the program, the settlement also shifted the litigation venue out of the federal court and into the state administrative hearing process (SWIM plans are subject to challenge under the Administrative Procedures Act.)

New legislation, mediation
In addition to the lawsuit, other efforts were underway that focused Florida's attention on the Everglades. In 1989, the Florida legislature adopted a local bill establishing the Everglades Agricultural Area Everglades Protection District. Through this district EAA land owners imposed a tax on themselves to raise funds for research and construction relating to Everglades restoration. In 1991, the legislature passed the Marjory Stoneman Douglas Everglades Protection Act.

The Act directed the South Florida Water Management District to adopt an Everglades SWIM Plan that would incorporate the stormwater treatment facilities and on-farm regulatory program envisioned in the settlement. The EAA farmers supported the establishment of both the Everglades Protection District and the Best Management Practices regulatory program; however, they challenged the remainder of the Everglades SWIM plan which the District attempted to adopt in March 1992.

With the SWIM plan officially challenged it soon became clear that the administrative hearing process would take years and consume millions of dollars, just as the federal lawsuit had before it, with no progress being made on improving the Everglades. So, by the end of 1992 the government parties agreed to enter into a technical mediation process that included representatives from interested parties including EAA farmers, environmental groups, the Seminole Tribe of Florida and the Miccosukee Tribe of Indians of Florida.

Larry's New York Style Subs now available in Belle Glade

A taste of New York without the attitude best describes the dining experience at Larry's Giant Subs, 329 North Main Street in Belle Glade.

Larry's is unlike anything else in the Glades. The decor alone warrants an initial visit. Patrons are transported directly to the Big Apple through a combination of reality and fantasy. Just as checkerboard cash ferry visitors to their destination in New York City, the yellow and black checkerboard tile at Larry's Giant Subs leads patrons to an entirely different dining experience.

There's really no secret to the success of Larry's Giant Subs. When you use the finest quality meats, cheeses and fresh ingredients in creative combinations you end up with great food. "We use only the best, top-of-the-line products to produce the best subs in town," according to Derik Royal, a representative of the Royal Companies, Inc. "Our bread is baked daily so it's fresh and tastes wonderful. We don't serve fast food, we serve quality food fast," Royal continued.

Besides the famous New York style subs, Larry's in Belle Glade has salad platters, bagel sandwiches, desserts, chips and soups year round. A variety of daily sandwich specials include chips or potato salad and a soft drink at reduced prices.

Larry's Giant Subs is proud to carry Hebrew National Kosher hot dogs with your favorite toppings...chili, slaw, sauerkraut, cheese...you name it! Larry's also features the following Premium meats: ham, fresh center cut roasted turkey breast and USDA Choice roast beef.

"Without a doubt, the number one sub at Larry's is the Ultimate. It's a combination of USDA choice roast beef, smoked roasted turkey and imported ham smothered with melted smoked Provolone cheese, onions, lettuce and tomatoes," Royal continued. "You can buy a 7-inch long medium sub (there's no such thing as a small sub at Larry's) or the popular foot long hot dog. After all, Larry's Giant Subs is The Home of the Big One!"

The number two sub in popularity is "The Big One." The "old sub" is filled with Provolone cheese, ham, pepperoni, Genoa salami, cooked salami, bologna, onions, lettuce and tomatoes. Does that sound good or what? You get your choice of condiments on any sandwich, so go for your favorite combinations. Or, how about The Destroyer...imported ham, pepperoni, Genoa salami, Capicola, cooked salami, bologna, Provolone cheese, onions, lettuce and tomatoes. The hardest part about visiting Larry's Giant Subs is deciding which sandwich to order.

Another popular choice is the New York Special. It has USDA choice roast beef with melted cheese, onions, lettuce and tomatoes. New York deli specialty sandwiches are available on white, wheat or rye bread.

"A lot of customers have told us they'd heard of Larry's Giant Subs, but they'd never tasted them before," Royal said, "but taste tells and they keep coming back."

The grilled chicken breast is a popular choice for salad lovers. Solid white breast filet is marinated and served on a bed of lettuce with cheese, turned into a sandwich with hot ham, cheese, bacon or a combination.

Larry and Mitchell Raikes opened their first New York Style Subs in Jacksonville in 1982 and its success led to the development of over 40 sub shop franchises in Jacksonville, Daytona and southern Georgia. Derik, Scott and Steve Royal, all principals in the Royal Company, recently secured franchise agreements for Larry's Giant Sub shops in Belle Glade, Lake Worth and Riviera Beach.

The present franchises sell more than one million sandwiches a year...that's a lot of roast beef and salami. Larry's is not a pre-made fast food business. Each sandwich is made with only the finest meats and cheeses and is prepared individually when ordered.

Be sure to ask for the FREE sub card and stamp. Purchase eight Medium 7" subs or eight Large 12" subs and receive a tomatoes, onions, olives and hot peppers. Other tasty salad selections include Greek, antipasto, tuna, egg and chef salads.

Searching for a good New York bagel? Bagels are sold at Larry's and can be ordered plain, with cream cheese or FREE sub of equal size.

Getting hungry? Larry's Giant Subs will cater special occasions, and offer subs in three and six foot lengths. Residents are cordially invited to visit Belle Glade's newest eatery at 329 North Main Street or call 996-7827 for additional information.

Local HIPPY selected for international story

International HIPPY (Home Instruction Program for Preschool Youngsters) in Jerusalem, Israel, has contacted the national office of HIPPY in New York and asked that office to make contact with all HIPPY state directors throughout the country to hand-pick a program which they feel has stories of interest.

A writer by the name of Barbara Soper, who is in Jerusalem, will be choosing only a select group of stories. Ms. Soper will be visiting those selected sites throughout the United States.

Coordinator Lorie Godwin was advised last week that the South Bay HIPPY program at Rosenwald Elementary has been selected by State Director, Dr. Mary Lindsey, Center of Excellence in Tampa, as the HIPPY site which will provide a story centering on the life of a migrant worker.

The gentleman chosen for the spotlight is Mr. Refugio "Pancho" Garcia, whose life began in the fields when his migrant mother carried him in a basket into the fields at 45 days old.

HIPPY of South Bay is extremely proud to be the chosen site for this international feature story.

Setting goals for the new year

By Paula Swaford, RN

As the new year rapidly approaches, many of us will set new goals for ourselves for the new year. Resolutions can be viewed as vows we make to ourselves... that we will resolve to do this or that, or not do this or that. The sad thing is that most will forget their goal when the going gets a little rough. Let's look at some things that will help us to make lifestyle changes and keep them.

When you decide to change something about your lifestyle, the motivation for that decision needs to be yours and yours alone. You can't make changes to please a spouse, a family member, an employer, or your friends. Your success depends on YOUR commitment—which can't depend on outside forces for inspiration. Don't try too many changes at once. You can't realistically expect to quit smoking and lose weight and begin an exercise program all in the same month. If you try it, you're setting yourself up for failure.

Success in lifestyle changes equals skills plus support. Some of the important skills you can adopt are goal-setting and relaxation techniques for minimizing your stress. Lifestyle changes require changing your behavior. Remember, however, that change is a process—change takes time—success is never achieved all at once. The obstacles to change are our own fears and the resistance to change from others. On a personal note, about ten years ago, after working 15 years as an LPN (licensed practical nurse), I became motivated to return to school to become an RN (registered nurse). Friends had been trying to motivate me to do this for many years, but I never felt like I could accomplish it and raise my two sons at the same time.

My older cousin came to Florida to visit us and we began to talk. In no time at all, she helped me to see that I really could do it, with a good support system in place. That was my "moment of truth," so to speak, when I decided that change was necessary and I had to take that "first step." This first stage of behavior change is the awareness stage.

The next stage is preparing. For the work to be done, this is called the preparation stage.

At this time, you must face fears and search for resources. You must make a commitment and write down your goals. I applied for federal grants and scholarships and was fortunate to obtain them. Then came the action stage where I took the action necessary to realize my goal. I enrolled initially in one class a semester at college and eventually acquired all the prerequisite credits needed to get into nursing school, and as they say... the rest is history.

Anyone of you can do the same and apply these stages to whatever goal you have. The maintenance stage sets in after about 90 days and you become totally focused on the goal you want to reach. You must weave these new behaviors into your lifestyle by practicing new skills, using positive reinforcement, and seeking support from friends and family. When you accomplish even the smallest of goals, don't forget to reward yourself and pat yourself on the back. After all, YOU DID IT!

That cousin of mine just waged her final battle with cancer this year and ultimately lost, but she never gave up and kept her eyes on the finish line. I'm glad I told her several years ago that it was her faith and confidence that motivated me to achieve my goals in life.

Until next time... stay informed and stay healthy.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH CORNER

By Faye Brandenburg

The holidays are upon us and usually this is a time when we all seem to over-indulge at the dinner table. Some parents worry when their child doesn't seem to be eating properly or not eating enough to "feed a bird." What should you do when your child's appetite has changed or a experiencing eating problems? Remember, children's appetites do vary, your child may eat well one day and the next day will not eat anything. Your child may want to eat the same thing day after day. All these are normal. During the second year of life, your child will not grow as fast, this may cause a smaller appetite.

Do not force your child to eat, this will only make your child refuse to eat even more. Your child doesn't eat any more after 15-20 minutes, let them leave the table. If they eat hungry later, offer foods from the meal. By offering your child a balanced meal three times a day, they will learn to eat a balanced diet. Don't put too much food on your child's plate, offer smaller portions and let your child ask for more. If your child drinks too much milk, this can take away from the appetite for her foods. 24 ounces of milk daily is plenty.

Watch the snacking between meals; offer fruits, juices and vegetables for snacks instead of sweets, chips, Kool-Aid or soda. Bribing or rewarding your child with food can cause your child to eat too much and most likely cause a weight problem. If you are a working parent, make sure your child's sitter or daycare provider understands and follows your guidelines. Grandmothers, grandfathers, aunts and other family members will usually support your efforts when they are aware of your child's needs and eating habits. We have to admit, it can be very tempting for relatives to spoil our children occasionally with special treats, especially on visits during the holidays when your child is excited about family festivities. Vitamins are not often needed after your child turns one-year old, check with your physician about these needs.

A sudden change in your child's appetite may be a sign of illness. If this happens, your child should be checked by the doctor. Don't forget, your eating habits become your child's eating habits. Set a good example by eating a variety of foods, limit sweets and other snacks, and keep your weight at a healthy level. Exercise is another important part of health; try to get your child to stay active and limit the amount of TV watching time.

Have a happy, healthy holiday season. As always, when in doubt, check with your child's physician and remember, children are special.

Hidden damage from physical trauma

By Bernard Stern, D.C.

It's a rare life that hasn't been punctuated by a traumatic brush (or collision) with reality. Although accidents may be unavoidable, much of the long term physical damage and suffering may be avoided with chiropractic care.

Anyone who has been in an accident should make sure that the trauma has not misaligned the vertebrae of the spinal column and caused nerve damaging vertebral subluxations. The vertebral subluxation causes interference in the nervous system which facilitates the chronic transmission of pain impulses (like the car alarm that goes off when someone sneezes instead of when the window is broken). It is recommended that anyone involved in an accident receive a chiropractic spinal exam to insure that the spine is free from these abnormalities.

Most accidents are minor and chiropractic care should be sought out as soon as possible. "Why?", you might ask, "If it's minor, what's the big deal?" The answer is that too often severe health problems first begin as a little fall, whiplash, bump, or shake-up that may have caused some pain initially, but was later forgotten.

Many times chiropractic

patients have discovered that because of their present complaints was a childhood fall or even birth trauma. There may have been no broken bones or serious bleeding, but there was spinal misalignment that was never corrected. The medical doctor may have checked them and said they were fine, but medical doctors are not trained to check for vertebral subluxations. Millions of people leave emergency rooms unaware that they are carrying around hidden spinal distortions that can cause health problems at a later date.

You see, residual problems may linger for months, years, or decades after an accident. These problems can involve any combination of injuries to the bones, muscles, and nerves. Commonly (but inaccurately) called "pinched nerves", there may be pains or muscle spasms in the neck, shoulders, arms, wrists, hands, legs, back, face, or head upon movement and/or when standing and sitting for long periods of time. Other post-accident problems may include insomnia, mental dullness, nervousness, anxiety, depression, constipation, diarrhea, headache, hearing problems, vision problems, reduced joint motion, and other symptoms.

Even after the best medical care, accident victims often continue to suffer pain, weakness, and disability. Such unfortunate may continue to use pain killers, muscle relaxants, various therapies, or repeated surgeries for years after the accident. "I feel like a walking medicine cabinet", is often the complaint of the post-accident victim. Sometimes they have flairs-ups that may debilitate them for days. Being dragged out all the time may deaden the pain, but does little or nothing towards healing.

These people have been told that there is nothing more that can be done and they will just have to learn to live with their problems. It is an unfortunate fact that many of the victims of auto accidents never fully recover under medical (including orthopedic) care. There is still pain, disability, and other constant reminders that they were hurt and haven't fully healed. These people need to know that a very important aspect of their care is still missing; the medical doctors haven't checked for spinal misalignments that may be causing pain or other symptoms and preventing proper healing. They need to know that in many cases chiropractic care may totally eliminate or greatly reduce their problems safely, quickly, and without drugs or surgery. If you or a friend or loved one has been in an accident, it is important to seek a chiropractic evaluation of the problem.

KEEP ON TRUCKING Sport-utility vehicles still leading the pack

By Mark Maynard
Copley News Service

Nearly 50 percent of all vehicle sales today are trucks.

For your shopping pleasure, or confusion, the launch of the 1998 buying season will see the introduction of several models and some re-imaging as GMC prepares to move upscale with Envoy (Jimmy) and Yukon Denali.

Later in the year will come the redesigned Ford F250 and F350 and possibly the Chevy C/K series, to be renamed Silverado.

The question remains: What is a truck?

This fall, look for a Dodge Ram Club Cab with four doors, the RX300 compact sport-ute from Lexus and its mountain-climbing competition from Mercedes-Benz, the ML320.

Subaru is selling the Forester, which is classified a car but looks like a little truck.

And Toyota is ready to fold the mainstream of minivan sales with Sienna, its replacement for the Previa.

MERCEDES-BENZ ML320

What do you get when you cross a Mercedes E-Class sedan with a mountain goat? The ML320 compact sport-utility vehicle.

This isn't a candy-coated SUV. It'll cruise the concrete canyons of Beverly Hills, and its full-time four-wheel drive (it'll match - or surpass - the Grand Cherokee or Land-Rover Discovery in the back country).

Expect it to take top honors for four-wheel-drive "Truck of the Year."

The ML320 is a Mercedes made in America: an all-new car with an all-new engine designed for the truck-loving American market at a factory in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

In ML320 lingo, the M is the model designation, M-Class. The L stands for nothing except to take away comparisons from BMW's M-Series of high-performance cars. And the 320 stands for the 3.2-liter V-6 engine. Next year there will be a M420 - a V-8.

For now, the drive line is an all-aluminum V-6, a departure from M-B's traditional in-line six cylinders, using three-valve technology for low emissions and low fuel consumption (17 mpg city/21 highway).

Out of 3.2 liters comes 215 horsepower and 232 foot-pounds of torque. It does 0-60 mph in nine seconds, which won't qualify it for the sprints (it weighs 4,200 pounds), but it moves out quite nicely and isn't prone to tipping.

The only transmission available is an electronically controlled and driver-adaptive five-speed automatic.

If you are familiar with the solid, smooth, quiet road manners of the E-Class sedan, then transfer that impression to the ML320 for a driving experience, plus you get four-wheel drive and a cargo hold.

There's room for five with front headroom and legroom of 39.8/40.3 inches and 39.7/38 inches in back. Later in the '98 year, two rear jump seats will be offered.

Pricing will start at about $35,000 moving up to just under $40,000 for an M-Class with all the options. The plant will build 60,000 in the next year, 40,000 of which are for North America, but with more than 100,000 prospects who have the money and the interest to buy one, don't expect to see these lingering on the lots.

SUBARU FORESTER

Now here's a sensible alternative to the buyer's dilemma of trendy sport-utility vs. family-class checkbook.

Subaru Forester looks trucky, but because it is built from the rally-class Impreza subcompact it is classified by the government as a car.

That also means it meets all passenger-car safety regulations, which the other mini sport-utes or compacts don't. With standard all-wheel drive, dual air bags, side-impact protection, 5 mph bumpers, rollover-style interior frame and low center of gravity, the Forester should get a nod of approval from every safety-conscious parent.

It boasts a compact sedan for interior room with its 40.6 inches of front headroom and 43 inches of legroom. In back, there's 39.6/39.4 for heads and legs.

Plus, there's nifty storage nooks at every cranny, including three under-floor compartments in the cargo area.

Power comes from a 165-hp 2.5-liter horizontally opposed "Boxer" four-cylinder (imagine the pistons boxing each other). Owners might wish for more lively acceleration, but probably not at the expense of its good fuel mileage, 21 mpg city, 27 highway. Five-speed manual or four-speed automatic transmissions are offered.

Available in three models, pricing starts at $19,190 for the base model; $20,490, L model; $22,690, S model; add $800 for four-speed automatic transmission; prices include $495 destination charge.

DODGE

Chrysler takes two big steps forward this season by building its biggest sport-ute yet, the Dodge Durango, and adding a second pair of doors to its Ram pickup.

The four-door Durango takes advantage of the solid Dakota pickup platform and expands on that with seating configurations that will fit up to nine passengers with the third-row bench option.

It comes only with a four-speed automatic transmission, in two- or four-wheel drive with a choice of three engines: the standard 175-hp, 3.9-liter V-6 or optional 230-hp, 5.2-liter V-8 and 250-hp, 5.9-liter V-8.

The raised roofline from the second row of seats rearward gives better headroom in the back seat than the front - 40.6 inches vs. 39.8. The elevated theater-style seating also means it's a little tighter in the front row with 37.9 inches for heads and 20.6 for legs.

The Ram Quad Cab is the first full-size extended-cab pickup to have four doors. The rear-hinged "access panels" make a wide-open bay for loading passengers and stuff. Front seat belts are integrated with the seat so there's no roof-mounted belt hanging in the rear entry path.

Also added was a less boxy instrument panel that improves on accessibility, which I always thought was pretty good as it was.

Headroom and legroom are the same as the Club Cab (extended cab), 39.4 inches of headroom, 31.6 legroom; standard, 67.7 inches; hips at 66.8. To put that hip and shoulder room into perspective, the back seat of the Cadillac DeVille has hip room of 55.9 inches and 61.1 for shoulders. (Granted, it has a lot more legroom.) The Quad Cab option adds $750 to the cost of the Club Cab, which translates to a base price of $20,365, (including $640 destination) for a 1500 2WD model or $23,595 for 4WD.

"We think the quad will be 60 (percent) to 65 percent of our (Ram) sales," said Mike Rosenau, manager Truck and Jeep public relations.

LEXUS RX300

Lexus will debut its second sport-utility, the compact RX300, set to go on sale in the first half of '98.

"It uses a V-6 platform, but is not based on the Camry as many have said," said company spokesman Mike Michels.

The RX300 uses a derivative of the ES300 sedan's V-6 engine but features continuously variable valve timing that adds about 10 percent more power than the 200-hp, 3.0-liter V-6 in the ES300.

Built on a unibody frame rather than a ladder frame, RX300 has a comfortable step-in height yet has more ground clearance than the Jeep Grand Cherokee.

It will come in two- or four-wheel drive, but RX300 stresses more carlike attributes. Michels said, leaving the rough climbing chores to its bigger ute, the LX450. The two-wheel drive model, by the way, will be front drive. The four-wheel drive is a full-time system with center viscous coupling.

Pricing will be in the low to high $30,000s.

NISSAN FRONTIER

It was nearly 40 years ago that this company started the compact pickup craze in the United States, and the Nissan Frontier marks the seventh generation of little haulers. This is also the first Nissan pickup to have a name.

Nissan says Frontier will have carlike comfort and convenience. Take your pick of regular or extended cab, two- or four-wheel drive.

It bows with a 2.4-liter 4-cylinder followed by the option of a 3.3-liter V-6 later in the year. The 4-banger meets California's requirements to be classified a LEV (low-emission vehicle).

It's built on a full ladder frame with such safety features as standard ABS, dual air bags with passenger-side cutoff switch and height-adjustable front safety belts.

TOYOTA SIENNA

The pricey Previa minivan is being replaced by the "Camry of minivans."

Not just will it emphasize carlike qualities, it is built from a stretched Camry wheelbase and uses basically the same front-drive, 3.0-liter V-6 engine and four-speed automatic transmission.

It also will be offered with four doors. Rumor has it that a power passenger-side rear slider will be offered.

To accommodate the front engine, Sienna is 6 inches longer than the mid-engine, rear-drive Previa. And while it is nearly 3 inches longer than its predecessor, Sienna has nearly identical interior room.

Because Camry only comes in a front-drive configuration, don't expect all-wheel drive as was available with Previa.

Pricing has not been announced, but with all the shared mechanicals expect it to come in significantly lower than the base $25,228 for a '97 Previa.

Put the brakes on holiday drunk driving

Consider joining the "One On For Safety Campaign" this holiday season. We can all help to make our roads safer by tying a MADD ribbon to our cars, asking friends not to drink and drive, and having a designated driver at parties.

About 1,868 lives could be saved on the road this holiday season. That's how many people died in alcohol-related car collisions in the United States between Thanksgiving and New Year's in 1996.

Whether you're the host of a party or a guest, the more you know about drinking and driving, the better everyone's chances are of staying safe and sober on the road.

Here are some common myths about drinking and driving:

MYTH: You can sober up with black coffee, a cold shower, fresh air or exercise.

REALITY: Nothing sobers up a drinker except time. The body needs about one hour to process each ounce of liquor.

MYTH: You can tell if someone is sober enough to drive just by looking at them.

REALITY: Some people can hardly stand up or string together a coherent sentence when they've been drinking. Other people are equally intoxicated but never stumble or slur their words.

MYTH: Drinking beer or wine doesn't make you drunk like hard liquor does.

REALITY: A 12 oz. beer, a 5 oz. glass of wine, and a 1 oz. shot of hard liquor all contain about the same amount of alcohol.

These facts are part of the annual "One On For Safety" campaign launched by All state Insurance Company and Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD).

"We want to send the message that there should be no more drunk driving victims," said Allstate President Robert W. Gary. "That's why we are asking drivers to tie a red MADD ribbon to their vehicles as a pledge to drive sober."

Allstate and MADD are offering free ribbons to remind everyone to stay safe and sober while celebrating. People can also make the holidays safer by committing themselves to driving sober, designating a non-drinking driver, and not letting party guests who had too much to drink drive home.

Contact your local Allstate agent for free MADD ribbons and a brochure, including alcohol-free recipes and other information about the campaign. You can also visit the insurance company's Web site at www.allstate.com or call toll-free 1-888-ALSPY.

Navigation Systems: The way to go

Wherever it is you want to go, you may no longer need to bother with maps, traffic reports and hard-to-follow directions to get there quickly and easily.

An automotive navigation system lets you program your destination, while CD-ROM mapping software determines the best route. With the help of global satellite positioning, the system always knows where you are, and the best way to get where you're going.

Until recently, only luxury automobile accessory packages offered this digital navigation technology, but innovations have greatly expanded consumer access.

The Philips CARIN system offers drivers both a visual display and verbal directions, male or female voice, in one of six languages. Choose from up to 40 destination categories, from a list of 100 favorite addresses, input a new destination or point it out on the system map.

Some of the benefits of computerized navigation include:

- Safety: The system allows drivers to keep maximum attention on driving and the traffic around them rather than on road signs, finding a street, or multi-fold maps. In heavy rain or fog, drivers can concentrate on the road, rather than exit signs. The system also provides local emergency and road

An automotive navigation system gives verbal and visual directions, helps avoid traffic trouble spots and can conveniently find hotels, restaurants, ATM machines, gas stations and points of interest.

side-assistance numbers.

- Saves Time: The system avoids the problems of sitting helplessly in a traffic jam, or driving aimlessly looking for a street or address. Drivers can avoid known problem areas, and evade unexpected traffic en route.

- Increased Efficiency: Truck drivers, sales persons, repair persons, real estate agents and others who are just plain busy can increase their efficiency. The personal travel manager lets you enter up to 25 addresses.

- Saves Money: Wasted miles add up to extra wear and tear on a vehicle, more maintenance and, in the long run, shorter vehicle life span. Wasted time means lost productivity and possibly unsatisfied customers.

- It's Fun: The system can help drivers pick where they'll dine, what sights they'll see, what friends they'll visit, and then seamlessly guide them to their destination.

Seven regional CD-ROM road maps are available for the United States, offering nationwide coverage of major highways and complete, detailed mapping of major metropolitan areas.

With directions well mapped out, you can concentrate on the essentials: safe driving, and the traffic around you.

CARIN, from Philips Car Systems, division of Philips Electronics, N.A., is available at Circuit City stores nationwide. For more information, visit the CARIN Website at www.carin.com or call 1-888-535-3500.

Traffic congestion relief could help prevent "Road Rage"

"Road Rage" can result from traffic congestion caused by an inadequate highway system.

The increasing incidents of "road rage" nationwide could be reduced by making needed highway improvements that would provide relief for stress-producing traffic congestion, reports a non-profit transportation research group.

"Motorists are facing increasing levels of stress, in part because we have not kept up with the tremendous increase in highway travel by making improvements such as widening lanes and roads to relieve traffic congestion. The failure to address this problem has contributed to motorists' growing frustration with high levels of congestion nationwide," says William M. Wilkins, executive director of The Road Information Program (TRIP).

"Drivers certainly should adopt more considerate driving habits and have respect for their fellow motorists," Wilkins says. "But the congested traffic situations, that often lead to road rage could be improved."

Wilkins points out that part of the problem is that motorists are constantly faced with situations involving stalled traffic because of the tremendous increase in overall highway travel. For example, since 1973, highway travel has increased by 84 percent while overall road mileage has increased by just less than three percent, according to data from the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA).

A U.S. Department of Transportation report noted that the average daily vehicles per lane of urban interstate increased from 9,990 vehicles to 12,808 vehicles from 1984 to 1994, resulting in a "spreading of congestion over longer periods of the day and on more routes."

Service Plus

For 20 years, "Goodwrench" was the name for quality automotive service at General Motors dealers/retailers, but now GM Service Parts Operations (SPO) has set even high standards of service with the nationwide launch of GM Goodwrench Service Plus.

"Over the years, customers have regarded the Goodwrench name as one they can count on for superior service and peace of mind. We have earned that kind of trust by offering high-quality service, trained technicians and genuine GM parts, and by continually working to raise our own standards for customer satisfaction," said E.H. "Gai" Smith, SPO's general sales manager for GM Parts. "That's exactly what we are doing with GM Goodwrench Service Plus. We're giving customers even more of what they have asked for."

Primary customer advantages of GM Goodwrench Service Plus include:

- Convenient service hours;
- Courtesy transportation;
- Upfront competitive pricing;
- A limited Lifetime Service Guarantee covering eligible parts and labor;
- GM Goodwrench Quick Lube Plus oil change service;
- New buyer orientation clinics and follow-up.

"This combination of features is a unique advantage of GM Goodwrench Service Plus, and sets us apart from the competition," said Smith.

Participation GM Goodwrench Service Plus dealers/retailers are required to display a competitive pricing board in their service write-up are, including "menu pricing" that allows customers to compare their prices with those of other local service providers.

Competitive services include: air conditioning/heating; shocks/struts; brakes; cooling systems; transmission service; starter/alternator service; engine maintenance tune-up; wheel alignments; GM parts eligible for the Lifetime Service Guarantee include: air conditioning compressors; air conditioning accumulators; CV joint/boot seat kits; EGR valves; fuel pumps; fuel injectors; ignition coils; ignition wire sets; ignition modules; individual ignition wires; new/remanufactured starter motors; new/remanufactured generators; oxygen sensors; shock absorbers/struts; throttle body injectors; and water pumps.

Another cornerstone of the process is the dealer/retailer's commitment to customer satisfaction and follow-up. All GM Goodwrench Service Plus dealers/retailers participate in a service tracking system that contacts every new-vehicle customer with a thank-you letter offering complimentary Quick Lube Plus service, a series of mileage-based service reminders, direct mail coupon promotions and other follow-up communications.

GM Goodwrench Service Plus customers will also benefit from new buyer service orientation clinics, which are scheduled by participating dealers/retailers every 90 days to Goodwrench Quick Lube Plus; exhaust; and rotating and balance of tires.

The Guarantee of a Lifetime

After a participating dealership finishes an eligible customer-paid repair, the GM Goodwrench limited Lifetime Service Guarantee (LSG) goes into effect immediately. Through the LSG, GM warrants that the original installing dealer will repair or replace any eligible parts that fail or wear out in normal use and service. LSG remains in effect for as long as the original purchaser owns the GM passenger car or light duty truck. Furthermore, repair or replacement will be made by the dealer/retailer with a new or remanufactured genuine GM part free of charge.

"Basically, this guarantee shows we stand 100 percent behind our GM products and our commitment to customers," said Smith.

"Giving our Customers a lifetime guarantee on parts and service is a great plus. It will definitely make us stand out from and above the rest," said Bob Mackie, general manager of Classic Chevrolet in Grand Rapids, Mich.

improve traffic flow and reduce the severity of congestion and help reduce the stress on motorists," Wilkins said. Wilkins also points out that highway safety is affected by a failure to make needed highway improvements. The FHWA has conducted studies that show that certain road and bridge improvements will reduce traffic fatalities and accidents. "This means" wider lanes and shoulders, adding lanes, adding or improving medians and upgrading roads," said Wilkins.

According to Wilkins, Congress has a chance to address these growing transportation problems in legislation that is now being debated and likely will be on the Congressional agenda beginning in 1998. Federal funding for the highway program expired on September 30, 1997. No agreement has been reached on the new legislation, primarily because of disagreement over funding levels.

Avoid falling asleep while driving

With today's busy lifestyles, people are often getting less sleep than they need. Sleepiness decreases driver awareness, slows reaction time and impairs judgment.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, approximately 100,000 crashes per year are caused by drivers who are fatigued or drowsy. About 1,500 of these crashes are fatal.

You are at risk of driving tired when you are driving: alone, long distances, through the night, or on long, boring roads.

You should know the symptoms of being too tired to drive.

These include: missing traffic signs, having wandering or disconnected thoughts, being unable to remember the last few miles, having trouble keeping your head up, and yawning repeatedly.

You can avoid driving tired by getting a good night's sleep before any long trip, avoiding driving at times when you body is used to being tired (mid-afternoon and through the night), taking breaks every two hours or so, and traveling with a companion.

For tips on the dangers of driving tired, call Allstate Insurance toll-free at 1-888-ALL-SFTY.

The Thump in your trunk

Your favorite song comes on and you rev up the volume of your car stereo. Suddenly your favorite song has lost its appeal thanks to the distorted sound now staggering through your speakers. An increase in volume usually requires some bass adjustment. You turn down the volume or decrease the amount of bass.

However, there is another option. Purchase a subwoofer. A subwoofer will take the stress off the woofer in your current speakers to restore quality sound. Since your car speakers cannot effectively produce this low frequency sound (bass), the subwoofer reproduces it.

Most subwoofers reproduce low frequency sounds between 20 Hz and 80 Hz. The lower the sound frequency, the more power needed to drive the speakers. The subwoofer provides this extra power.

Subwoofers and amplifiers go hand-in-hand. In fact, some subwoofers have built-in amplifiers. Amplifiers boost the signals from the CD player, cassette deck or radio so that sound can be heard through the speakers. In addition, they work in conjunction with equalizers, faders and quality speakers to overcome road noise without distorting the sound.

Subwoofers range in size from eight inches to 15 inches. Optimal sound can be achieved by placing the subwoofer in the front dashboard of the automobile because the perception of multiple sound sources is eliminated. To maximize sound, however, the subwoofer needs to be enclosed, and the lack of space in the dashboard for an enclosure may require drastic modifications to your interior. Instead, subwoofers are placed in the trunk to avoid such changes. Amplifiers are also housed in the trunk.

With the superior quality of music provided by a subwoofer and an amplifier, you may discover new favorite tunes. To ensure proper installation, look for the Mobile Electronics Certification Program (MECP) sign at your local electronics retailer. A Nationally accredited program, MECP assures the competency and skill levels of installers. To locate an MECP retailer near you, call 1-800-767-MECP.

"If you have had a dramatic increase in highway travel without making adequate improvements to our road and bridge system, it is bound to lead to more severe congestion, add to traffic safety problems and contribute to the frustra-
